HOUSEHOLD MORALS.—Time is Money.

"Of course it is," says the reader; "we know that!" Yes, we all know it; but where is the man who habitually bears it in mind, and constantly acts upon the conviction? "Time is money!" Act at once, then! Beware of DAWDLING! Set to work, and take your recreation when your work is done. "Time is an estate," which produces nothing without cultivation, but which never fails to recompense the labours of the diligent worker. Keep working, for "Time is money." Keep working, for the idle man is not only the poor man; he is also a helpless and miserable man! "Time is money"—Time is opportunity. How unwise, then, to waste it! How foolish to neglect to improve it. Some take no account of the value of money until they have come to an end of it. Let us not be foolish enough to be similarly heedless of the value of our time, and to allow it to slip away wholly unimproved.
